Ballroom Etiquette. Guests are privileged to arrive at a ball at any hour before midnight. Men and women check their veraps in their respective dressing rooms and bow door to receive them. If a woman is not asked at once to dance she should seat herself beside her chaperon. As soon as a dance is over a woman, pany her back to her seat beside her present, as a matter of courtesy to the aged, and next to his wife.

When to Rise.

The hostess always rises for an introduction unless she is much older than those whom she is receiving. A man must always rise for an introduction. Under ordinary circumstantes a weman need not rise for an it troduction to either a man or a weman inless the person introduced is much older then lerself or is particularly distinguished. In such a case it would be correct for her to show deference by Legauzed Theft.

Theft was at one time legalized. We are told that the young Spartans were taught to steal by the authorities for the purpose, presumably, of making them good foragers in wartime. In Egypt professional thieves gave in their names to the chief of the robbers and agreed that he should be informed of everything they might steal. The owner of lost goods applied to the chief for their recovery, and on payment of one-quarter of their value they were restored in full. The chief robber was salaried by the government.
